COURSE DESCRIPTION

Anxiety in children is increasing at a startling rate and is causing significant disruptions and difficulties in the classroom and therapy room. Through interactive learning, videos, and engaging presentations, this course will provide information on identifying anxiety disorders in children and adolescents and will give practical strategies for helping children and adolescents decrease anxiety and increase social, emotional, and academic participation. Additionally, participants will learn simple, easy-to-implement behavioral and cognitive-behavioral strategies for addressing anxiety in the classroom and therapy room.

Learner Objectives: Upon completion of this course, participants will be able to:

- Describe the avoidance cycle and how it pertains to anxiety disorders.
- Summarize strategies to differentially reinforce brave behavior while reducing avoidant and anxious behavior.
- Identify interventions that parents can be using in the home to also facilitate emotional growth and reduce anxiety

AGENDA

- 9:00 Where does anxiety develop?
10:00 General intervention strategies for reducing anxiety
11:00 Break (15 min)
11:15 Classroom-specific intervention strategies
11:30 Therapy-specific intervention strategies
11:45 How to talk to parents about their child's anxiety

BIOGRAPHICAL INFORMATION

Dr. Kotrba graduated with her doctorate degree in clinical child psychology from Wayne State University and has owned Thriving Minds since 2012. She loves clinical work but has also taught graduate-level psychology at Michigan State University and has worked as a neurodevelopmental consultant/evaluator at St. Joseph Hospital for over 10 years. She is a nationally-known expert and speaker on the identification and treatment of Selective Mutism, a childhood anxiety disorder, and loves working with families to promote “brave talking”. Dr. Kotrba has authored Selective Mutism: An Assessment and Intervention Guide for Therapists, Educators, and Parents and Overcoming Selective Mutism: A Field Guide for Parents. She created and co-directs Confident Kids Camp, a camp for children and teens with Selective Mutism that runs annually in Brighton Michigan (with offshoot camps in the metro DC area and Toronto, Canada). She also provides education to parents, school personnel, and professionals about Selective Mutism, offering informative and engaging webinars including Unlocking the Mystery of Selective Mutism.
