COURSE DESCRIPTION

Dr. Hanley, a nationally recognized speaker, will present a contemporary and trauma-assumed version of applied behavior analysis for consideration when working with students who engage in severe problem behavior. He will discuss the values at the forefront of this compassionate, collaborative ABA approach, which addresses behavior problems and increases cooperation in educational settings via a sequential, skill-building process.

This session is geared for personnel working with students with severe behavioral problems, severe acting out behaviors and Oppositional Defiant Disorders in district or center-based settings.

Through lecture, interactive discussion, and application exercises, attendees will learn about the latest iteration of assessment and teaching procedures. Dr. Hanley will emphasize strategies for maximizing the safety and dignity of the process, as well as for strengthening student-educator relationships. He will describe in detail the skill-building process, which consists of teaching students' communication and toleration repertoires, and then to engage and persist with personally challenging tasks (e.g., academics, social skills activities). The presentation will also address several choice models for further minimizing risks and for meeting the needs of students with advanced language skills.

Individuals, Administrators, and building teams are all encouraged to attend and learn effective approaches to implement in their educational settings directly from Dr. Hanley!

Learner Objectives:

Upon completion of this course, participants will be able to:

- describe the importance of a trauma-assumed approach
- list three values that have implications for assessment and teaching
- discuss how to develop replacement skills quickly and safely, while minimizing the possibility of escalated problem behavior and without the use of physical management
- describe how to teach communication, toleration, and contextually appropriate behavior skills to students with varied strengths and needs
- describe different choice models in which teaching may be conducted to further minimize escalated forms of problem behavior

ABOUT THE SPEAKER

Dr. Hanley has been applying the principles of learning to improve socially important behaviors of children and adults with and without disabilities for over 30 years. He worked and trained at the Kennedy Krieger Institute, was degreed at the University of Florida, tenured at the University of Kansas, and directed the Behavior Analysis Doctoral Program and Life Skills Clinic at Western New England University (WNEU).

Dr. Hanley has published over 100 book chapters and articles in peer-reviewed journals in areas such as the assessment and prevention of problem behavior, teaching tactics for young children, and evidence-based values. Dr. Hanley is a Fellow of the American Psychological Association (Div. 25), past Associate Editor of The Behavior Analyst, and past Editor of the Journal of Applied Behavior Analysis and of Behavior Analysis in Practice.

He currently serves as a Research Professor at WNEU, and CEO of FTF Behavioral, an international training and consulting group based in Worcester Massachusetts. This group of researcher-practitioners supports professionals attempting to create meaningful outcomes with practical functional assessment processes and skill-based treatments for addressing emerging and severe problem behavior, intractable stereotypy, food selectivity and mealtime problem behavior, and sleep problems.
